

Israel strikes Beirut in hunt for Hezbollah

written by Prof. Kobi Michael | 24.10.2024

Prof. Kobi Michael: Hezbollah and Hamas operate with a similar strategy based on the principle of embedding themselves deeply within civilian society, exploiting civilian facilities for terror purposes, and ultimately using civilians as human shields. This is in direct contrast to the IDF's efforts to avoid harming the civilian population and its calls for everyone to evacuate the combat zones to ensure their safety. The IDF is focusing on two main objectives: first, to clear southern Lebanon, up to the Litani River, of all the terrorist nests that Hezbollah has prepared and planned for operations against northern Israel; and second, to address Hezbollah's strategic arsenal, particularly its short- and long-range missiles.

Senior US officials have daily job of auditing Israeli aid to Gaza

written by Arsen Ostrovsky | 24.10.2024

Arsen Ostrovsky on U.S. Secretary Blinken's recent visit to the region and criticism of the humanitarian aid going into Gaza, saying: If Washington really wants to help the situation in Gaza, it should "force Qatar and Turkey to pressure Hamas into accepting the U.S.-brokered deal and release of the hostages," rather than "putting more pressure on Israel, who are already doing everything we can, while being forced to fight a seven-front war against Iran.

How will the Jewish people celebrate Simchat Torah this year?

written by David M. Weinberg | 24.10.2024

David M. Weinberg: This year, merriment will surely take a step back, with the traditional hakafot – circles of dancing – modulated by the addition of poems and prayers that focus on repair, redemption, resilience, and heroism.

That said, the elevation of Torah learning on Simchat Torah, along with the traditional prayers for prosperity on the simultaneous holiday of Shmini Atzeret, are serious religious milestones that cannot be eviscerated by Hamas. The Hamas invasion and massacre should be formally commemorated with all appropriate solemnity and solidarity on other days.

What next for Hamas after killing of 'ultimate leader' Yahya Sinwar?

written by Prof. Kobi Michael | 24.10.2024

Prof. Kobi Michael: In the end, Sinwar was the ultimate leader of Hamas, not only in the Gaza Strip, but he was also elected to replace Haniyeh as the head of the political wing, which means the leader of the entire organisation. So, the organisation, once again lost its head. But what is more crucial than that, it lost its most crucial centre of gravity in the Gaza Strip.

As Iran's proxy strategy weakens, focus shifts to nuclear program

written by Brig. Gen. (res.) Yossi Kuperwasser | 24.10.2024

Brig. Gen. (res.) Yossi Kuperwasser: Hezbollah has been significantly weakened and this undermines Iran's deterrence and could prompt the regime to explore the nuclear option as a form of ultimate deterrence.

In light of Israeli successes, and in light of the fact that Trump could win the U.S. elections [scheduled for less than a month from now], this could strengthen those [in Iran] who support a breakout now. At the same time, they also have considerations that pull them in the opposite direction. Even if they discussed this, there is no expression that, at this time, they took a certain decision to move forward.

It's a very high risk, especially in the current environment.

U.S. Pressure: A Lifeline for Hamas at Israel's Expense

written by Ruth Wasserman Lande | 24.10.2024

Ruth Wasserman Lande: The American elections are extremely challenging and sensitive. Does Israel need the United States by its side? Yes, it does. Is the United States currently sending a problematic message to Israel, preventing it from fully succeeding? Yes, it is. One of the main examples, aside from Iran, is in the Gaza Strip. If the United States had allowed Israel to act decisively and much earlier, it would have been the only leverage, aside from military force, that could push Hamas to release the hostages. Instead, American pressure is essentially providing Hamas with a lifeline, allowing them to steal humanitarian aid, sustain themselves, and continue engaging in terrorism, rather than creating sustainable sources of income for the people.

I expects Israel to strike Iran's nuclear sites

written by Brig. Gen. (res.) Yossi Kuperwasser | 24.10.2024

Brig. Gen. (res.) Yossi Kuperwasser: I expects Israel to strike Iranian nuclear sites in one of its "rounds" of attacks against Iran. Not only do I expect that, but I expect the international community to support us.

I believe this is true, because everybody has to understand this is not going to be a one-time attack by Israel.

Given Israel will be launching multiple rounds of attacks against Iran, we have to make sure the Americans know we are attentive to their concerns about wide-scale regional war.

The nuclear sites will have to be dealt with in the next round, if it's not going to be dealt with this round.

The latest on Hezbollah, Iran and the role of UNIFIL

written by Arsen Ostrovsky | 24.10.2024

Arsen Ostrovsky: Hezbollah is not the Salvation Army. They are a genocidal terror group, sworn to Israel's destruction and acting at the behest of the Iran regime. And that they are doing all this right under the noses of UNIFIL.

Israel's actions against Iran will depend on the level of cooperation between Israel and the USA

written by Prof. Kobi Michael | 24.10.2024

Prof. Kobi Michael: Israel's actions against Iran and the targets it chooses will depend on the level of cooperation between Israel and the United States. If Israel is able to reach an understanding with the U.S. regarding the destruction of Iran's nuclear infrastructure—whether not in the initial phase of operations, but perhaps after Iran's response—I assume that Israel will target military assets, and possibly symbolic targets as well, during the next stage of operations. However, if Israel is unable to reach an understanding with the U.S. by November 5th, the day of the U.S. presidential election, I assume Israel will proceed independently, targeting a broader range of sites, including Iran's nuclear infrastructure.
