

The Abraham Accords will serve us to rebuild regional ties after the war

written by Asher Fredman | 16.09.2025

Asher Fredman: The Abraham Accords were an outpouring of cooperation on every level — the diplomatic level, the people-to-people level, the economic level, literally in almost every field imaginable.

If we want a better future in the region, we have no choice but to rebuild. The ties that have been built in the Abraham Accords hopefully will serve all of us as we do the hard work of beginning to rebuild the ties following the war in Gaza.

The full interview was published in The Media Line, on September 16, 2025.

