

Beyond the Two-State Solution: A New Regional Architecture

written by Prof. Kobi Michael | 12.06.2026

Prof. Kobi Michael argues that a two-state solution is currently unviable due to deep internal Palestinian divisions and their refusal to recognize Israel as a Jewish nation-state, suggesting instead a “new regional architecture” that addresses the Iranian threat.

He further contends that international recognition of a Palestinian state is counterproductive because it discourages bilateral negotiations and ignores the necessity of eliminating Hamas and reforming the Palestinian Authority.

The full interview took place on NewsX World on June 12, 2026.

*The opinions expressed in Misgav publications are the authors' alone.