Global Realignment and the Iranian Threat

written by Prof. Kobi Michael | 19.11.2026

Prof. Kobi Michael warns that a potential division of global influence among major superpowers could leave Israel in a problematic strategic position regarding Iran.

He argues that diplomacy with radical regimes is ineffective without prior military defeat, stressing the necessity of confronting Iran’s accelerating ballistic missile threat and persistent anti-Western ambitions.

The full interview took place on ILTV on November 19, 2026.

*The opinions expressed in Misgav publications are the authors’ alone.