

Strategic Misjudgments and the Looming Iranian Collapse

written by Prof. Kobi Michael | 22.04.2026

Prof. Kobi Michael argues that the Iranian regime faces internal fragmentation and severe economic strain from sanctions, which may lead to its eventual collapse if current pressures continue.

He also assesses that a resumption of military conflict is highly likely because Iran misjudges its strategic leverage and diplomatic gaps remain unbridgeable.

The full interview aired on NDTV on April 22, 2026.

*The opinions expressed in Misgav publications are the authors' alone.