Israeli soldiers face growing risk of arrest abroad over Gaza

written by Arsen Ostrovsky | 06.01.2025

Arsen Ostrovsky: The actions of the Hind Rajab Foundation amounted to "lawfare," a term used to describe the strategic use of legal action to damage an opponent.

The biggest impact here will be a reconsideration of soldiers' travel plans to certain destinations and an adverse effect on diplomatic relations between Israel and those countries that entertain these baseless legal assaults.

The incoming Trump administration will also have a key role to play. They have already threatened to unleash a fury of sanctions against the International Criminal Court, which ought to be extended to any country that seeks to entertain this egregious abuse of the law by extremist anti-Israel groups hounding IDF soldiers.

Published in The National News, January 6, 2025.

